TRAITS & FEATURES

Best Sweet Tea in Tiamat. Anyone who drinks Granma Beth's sweet tea gains 2d4+4 temporary HP and has advantage on WIS saves for 1 hour. She always has some ready.

Grandmother's Intuition. Granma Beth has advantage on Insight checks against anyone. She always knows when someone is lying, hungry, or sad.

Beloved by All. No creature with an Intelligence of 4 or higher can willingly attack Granma Beth unless magically compelled. DC 20 WIS save to overcome this effect.

Widowed. Her husband died in an orcish raid years ago. She keeps his pipe on the mantle and talks to it sometimes.

She's Prolly Gonna Die. Granma Beth is very old. She has 22 HP and no combat abilities. Protect her at all costs.

ACTIONS

Wooden Spoon. Melee Weapon Attack: +0 to hit, reach 5 ft. Hit: 1 bludgeoning damage. But the emotional damage is devastating.

Offer Tea. One creature within 5 ft. is offered sweet tea. If they accept, they gain the benefits of Best Sweet Tea in Tiamat.

Stern Talking-To. One creature within 30 ft. that can hear Granma Beth must succeed on a DC 16 WIS save or feel deeply ashamed, suffering disadvantage on attack rolls for 1 minute.

LORE & ESSENCE

"Sit down, dear. Have some tea. You look like you haven't eaten in days."

Granma Beth is the sweetest old lady in the entire realm of Tiamat. She lives in the small town of Harven, makes the best sweet tea anyone has ever tasted, and has a heart big enough to love every soul who crosses her threshold. Her husband was killed in an orcish raid, and she carries that grief quietly, talking to his pipe in the evenings. She is old, frail, and has no combat abilities whatsoever. She is also, somehow, the most important NPC in the campaign — because if she dies, the players will burn the world down to avenge her.

KEY RELATIONSHIPS

Her Late Husband. Killed in an orcish raid. She still talks to his pipe every night.

Everyone. Granma Beth loves everyone and everyone loves Granma Beth. That's just how it is.
